

Francois Stieger

Francois Stieger is CEO of Intentional Software International Sarl. Immediately prior to joining Intentional Software International, Mr. Stieger was senior vice president and general manager of Europe, Middle East and Africa for Verisign, the leading provider of critical infrastructure security services for the Internet and telecommunication markets. Before joining Verisign, Stieger was a partner of Amadeus Capital, a leading European venture capital firm based in London.

In 1996, Stieger established BroadVision's European operations. Under his management through mid 2001, these operations grew to more than 400 employees and US$104 million annual revenues. He was also personally involved in BroadVision's very successful initial public offering on NASDAQ in June 1996, and its public offering on the Neuer Markt in Frankfurt in November 1999. From 1987-1992, Mr. Stieger was Vice President of Oracle Corporation, where he established and managed operations of Oracle Corporation for southern and central Europe. Mr. Stieger is a graduate of the University of Strasbourg's Institute of Technology.